The Storm in the West

CHICAGO, Feb 18.—The [illegible] which began last evening continued all night at a very even rate, and at this morning there was [illegible] of snow on the ground in the city. Signal service reports show that the storm commenced in northern Texas where there was a heavy rain and travelled northward rapidly [illegible] the rainfall was 85-100. At this point, reducing the snow to water, the fall was 63-100. Snow in Illinois as far west as Mendota was [illegible] to 8 inches deep. Westward from there to the Mississippi it was gradually increased to 10 inches. In Iowa the fall was less. There has been great delay on the railroads. Many freights were abandoned and all are delayed. On the Lake Shore, Michigan Central and Baltimore & Ohio the delay on the passenger and mail trains is from 2 to 10 hours. Other eastern lines are more nearly on time, the Pittsburg and Fort Wayne being notably prompt. Of western trains none are on time but are all working to clear the tracks and hope to have open track to-night.

A Matter of Authority

Corporation Counsellman Crawford has given the opinion that the city council may order the closing up of Lasalle street for the purpose of erecting thereon the proposed new board of trade building, provided payment of damages is made. The question is not one of power but of expediency. According to this view it is probable that the board will take immediate steps to secure passage by the council of an ordinance to close up that street. A two third vote will be necessary.

Railroad Accident in Colorado.

LEADVILLE, Feb 18.—The charred body of Geo. S. McMillan, a miner, was found in his cabin yesterday, result of a lamp explosion.

Advance in Office Rents at New York

An extortionate advance for office rents in lower Broadway and the whole street is causing much indignation among stock brokers who are compelled to move in May. Prices have quintripled in some cases over last year and landlords are insisting on 3 and 5 year leases at these rates. Brokers generally refuse to sign long leases at the advanced prices.

The River and Harbor Bill.

The senate committee on commerce will to-morrow take up the river and harbor bill and set a day and night until it is completed. Last session it took two weeks, but no such time can be consumed now. The senate will increase the aggregate considerably and there will be determined opposition to its passage in the senate by the republicans and by a few democrats. Its final passage is somewhat doubtful if dilatory motions are made by leading members.

The Funding Bill.

Influential committees of the house say that the funding bill will pass the house as it came from the senate without delay. The president will doubtless be urged to veto it and call an extra session on the ground that it is a risky experiment and because the section compelling national banks to deposit 3 per cents for circulation is oppressive.

The Ponca Bill.

The house Indian committee will not report the bill for the relief of the Poncas, but will request $160,000 to carry out the agreement with the Poncas.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

Manifesto by Shaw, Home Ruler.

LONDON, Feb 18.—A manifesto issued by Wm. Shaw, home rule member of parliament for County Cork, is addressed to the Right Rev. John McCarthy, Catholic bishop of Cloyne. It reviews the course pursued by the Irish parliamentary party since he (Shaw) held the leadership and condemns the programme adopted by that party which he declares has been marked out for it across the Atlantic [illegible] [illegible] I can understand and respect a revolutionist, but despise and condemn a mongrel that talks bluster by hints at physical force, but also slinks away at the first hint of danger, leaving the poor people he has fooled helpless in the hands of an enraged class and the government.

A Reserve Power

The Manchester Guardian, discussing the monetary conference, says: A section in the bank of England charter act provides that the issue department may emit notes upon silver to the extent of one-fourth the amount of gold coin and bullion held by that department. The practice for many years has fallen into disuse. If, however, it is now enforced, the bank might immediately buy over £8,000,000 worth of silver. It appears, therefore, that without joining the ranks of the bi-metallists, countries we can render them a very substantial help. We do not say that it would be wise to use the power to its full extent, and still less to do so all at once. The above section of the act was intended to rectify the disproportion in the supply of the two metals. There is nothing improbable in the supposition that the government may see in the present circumstances occasion for using powers which have long been in abeyance.

Why Ireland is Pacific.

PARIS, Feb 18.—Parnell told Victor Hugo that though an Irish insurrection would be legitimate, the league had been dissuaded from such an attempt, as the Irish are unarmed.

The Franklin Relics.

MEXICO

Indian Outrages in Northern Mexico.

TUCSON, Feb 18.—Information received this morning from Hermosillo, state of Sonora, Mexico, is to the effect that the Yaqui Indians are preparing for a general revolt. They have driven all ranchers out side of what they claim as their land, which covers an area of about 2[illegible] square miles and is the most fertile and richest mineral land in the state. They rob all travelers who pass through their country irrespective of nationality. The Mexican government proposes to send 4000 troops to build posts and protect settlers who may return. 2500 of the troops are now en route from Guadalajara and 1500 are to be recruited at Guaymas and Hermosillo. The Yaquis are about 1[illegible] strong and can muster between [illegible] warriors. They are partially civilized [illegible] farming and mining are their chief [illegible]. They declare that they will never give up their territory [illegible] allow any other people [illegible] their own to settle on these lands.

THE RAIL.

Villard and the Northern Pacific

NEW YORK, Feb 18.—The Post says: In part confirmation of the report yesterday that the $8,000,000 raised by the chief organizer of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company were to be used in obtaining control of the N. P. R. R., we have to-day the authority of a leading banker for the statement that the chief promoter of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company told him that he had already a majority of the North Pacific stock.

Villard's "Blind Pool."

The Bulletin says: We understand that Mr. Villard recently accomplished a feat which John Law might well have been proud of in his palmiest days, of getting subscriptions of $16,000,000 to a blind pool of $8,000,000 and of seeing unguaranteed allotments of $8,000,000 sell at a premium the next day of 30 to 40 per cent. Villard we are quoted as informing a Boston banker that he had already control of the Northern Pacific railroad in the interest of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Co., his creature and pet. Assuming that there is no mistake about this, the tail will hereafter wag the dog. The recent advance surprised those who know most of the property, but Villard's blind pool is the key which unlocks whatever mystery there was about it.

Railroad Pooling Arrangement.

BOSTON, Feb 18.—The Journal announces that negotiations for a pooling arrangement are already opened between the U. P. and Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co. for division from passenger and freight business to and from the Pacific. Thomas Nickerson is treasurer of the new line.

The New California Southern.

BOSTON, Feb 18.—The California Southern railway, which has been organized by parties largely interested in the Atlantic and Pacific railroad, to build a standard gauge road and telegraph line to San Diego to connect with the Atlantic and Pacific in California, to-day issued circulars offering 6 per cent bonds at $20,000 per mile of constructed road running 40 years, and in connection therewith 2,548,000 of first mortgage bonds to cover the cost of constructing the first 110 miles. There are reserved bonds at the rate of $7,000 per mile and an amount of capital stock equal to $7,000 per mile will also remain unsubscribed, which is to be used in paying interest on bonds in case of deficits in earnings during construction. The circular also announces that citizens of San Diego have given the company 200 acres of land for terminal facilities and city blocks, and that the San Diego Land and Town Company has been formed with a capital of $1,500,000. Each subscriber of $1100 will receive ten shares of par value of $100 each of the capital stock of the California Southern Railroad Co., $1000 in said bonds of the same company, and one share of capital stock of the San Diego Land and Town Co., promptly delivered, and two additional shares of the last named stock when the same shall be received by the railroad company in exchange for that part of its land subsidies now held in trust for its benefit.

THE FUNDING BILL.

Comment by New York Papers on the Senate's Action.

The Express says: The announcement that the funding bill has passed the senate with the fifth section retained, which compels banks to deposit the new bonds as security for circulation, had an unfavorable influence on general markets and caused a sharp decline in prices. There was great pressure to sell just at the close.

The Commercial Bulletin says: This was a day of great excitement and wide fluctuations in the stock market. Taking the stock list as a whole it was feverish, there having been intervals of strength quickly followed by others of weakness. At the close, when news came from Washington that the senate had passed the funding bill, 5th section and all, there was a rush to sell stocks and the market was left very unsettled and almost panicky. The reason for this is fear that banks in large cities will revolt against the provisions of this bill so far as it relates to them and will go out of the national system, and that confusion and trouble will result. These fears may prove groundless, but they influenced those who had a profit on their stocks to sell out so as to be in position to await developments. It is not unlikely that European holders of maturing [illegible] and 5 per cent bonds may hesitate to take short 3 per cent bonds in their place at a higher price than British consols, which run for [illegible] and that they will return their bonds here. If this happens foreign exchanges will likely enough rise to the gold exporting point.

A Surprise to Wall Street

NEW YORK, Feb 18.—The Post says: The three per cent rate surprised Wall street, although there is high banking authority for the belief that the 3 per cent bond [illegible] it is understood that the 3½ rate would be no sense have been experimental. The present bill has provisions respecting banks which may well make it a question with New York city banks at least whether it would not be well to go out of the national system and organize under state laws.

A Banker's Views of the Pending Bill

WASHINGTON, Feb 18.—A prominent banker here watching the debate on the funding bill expressed the opinion to-day that if congress passed the bill providing for short per cent bonds and requiring the national banks to take them and surrender their 4½ per cents, many national banks would surrender their circulation. If this should be done the bonds could not be floated successfully and there would be a tight money market.

To Grind through the House Again

WASHINGTON, Feb 18.—The funding bill now goes to the house for concurrence in the senate amendments of 3-6-0 instead of 6 1/2 bonds—compensation one-half instead of one quarter of one per cent for placing the loan—a provision for popularizing the loan in the sense of having it taken by the people, and several verbal alterations.

A CLOSE CHASE.

How Mormon Delegate Cannon Served Notice of Contest on Gentile Delegate Campbell

WASHINGTON, Feb 18.—An amusing feature of the Cannon-Campbell contest has just come to light. Gov. Murray gave a certificate of election to Campbell. When Cannon heard this he took steps to serve notice of contest on Campbell, having thirty days under the law to perform this ceremony. Campbell left Salt Lake ostensibly for Washington but never reached here. This put Cannon off the track. He was daily looking for Campbell so as to serve notice of contest, but Campbell came not. Cannon telegraphed to New York, Chicago, Omaha and Salt Lake, but could not get the run of Campbell's rapid movements. He accidentally heard of him at Circleville, Kansas, and telegraphed there, but the bird had flown. Becoming thoroughly frightened for fear that the thirty days would expire, Cannon sent four notices of contest to Salt Lake, each to a particular friend, with instructions to hunt up Campbell regardless of expense. One man took the train east and accidentally met Campbell at Green river station on the very last day of the thirty. Campbell was about to sit down to breakfast in fancied security, but the man with four wives and a seat in congress was too much for him.

BOSS ROSCOE.

A Stalwart Sounds his Glories

CHICAGO, Feb 18.—A Tribune correspondent has talked with a stalwart republican respecting Conkling's visit to Mentor and he said incidentally that all speculation upon what the president-elect will do is nonsense. He will not in my opinion do anything to provoke Senator Conkling. Depend upon that. The republicans of New York are a power that no president can afford to antagonize. President Hayes sought a fight with Conkling. Mark the result. Arthur and Cornell were removed from the custom house. The one is now vice president-elect, while the other is governor of New York. Thomas C. Platt was refused a place in Hayes' cabinet. He is now United States senator from this state. Conkling administered all these rebukes and now goes to Mentor with all Mr. Hayes' nominations in his pocket.

The district appropriation bill was taken up and passed. It appropriates nearly $3,500,000.

Allison for the chairman (Davis of W. Va.) reported with amendments the legislative appropriation bill and gave notice by request that the bill would be called up Monday or Tuesday [illegible] calendar.

The evening session to-day was dispensed with.

The cattle disease bill was taken up and amendment of the senate committee adopted. Without further action the senate went into executive session and when the doors opened adjourned.

Callao and Lima Pillaged by Peruvian Troops—Joy for Victory Changed to Mourning for Defeat—Frightful Scene of Plunder

SPECIAL [illegible]

[illegible] the fortune of battle [illegible] Lima and Callao [illegible] frightened by the glare of burning ships and frequent explosions of dynamite which was placed under every gun which defended the forts. No sooner did the rioters get a taste of pillage and weapons [illegible] they systematically began sacking stores and houses without regard to nationality. In Callao perhaps 50 Chinese were killed. As most of them were killed on the [illegible] of the town and upon the open pampas it is probable that they were pursued and murdered simply for the pleasure of killing. In Lima the loss was greater and the riot began earlier. Some hundreds of Chinese were massacred. Not only does it appear that the rioters were instigated and encouraged in their barbarities by the superior officers of the Peruvian army and navy, but many squads of rioters were led by Peruvian officers who participated in the plunder. DALLES, Feb 18.—The [illegible] passage of the steamer Harvest Queen over Tumwater falls and through the dangerous Dalles [illegible] [illegible] all previous [illegible] [illegible] awarded [illegible] wonderful trip [illegible] Capt. Troup [illegible] [illegible] two weeks [illegible] the first step of the [illegible] was taken and [illegible] secured from her [illegible] Tumwater first [illegible] her way to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] water [illegible] repair [illegible] had sustained as well as to gird [illegible] the coming struggle. [illegible] the terrible Dalles [illegible] through which [illegible] at this stage of water was deemed by men of experience almost an impossible feat. But not so with her fearless captain. He said that he could take her through and he did it.

The first difficult passage was made on Tuesday the 15th inst., when she was brought through the Still Dalles without receiving so much as a scratch. This in itself was a wonderful feat when it is considered that through a passage less than 200 feet wide flows the water of the entire Columbia, and not straight either, as the immense body of water striking the shoulder of the entrance on one side dashes itself [illegible] to the other side. The captain [illegible] but on approaching the passage he found the current too strong to back and [illegible] was taken instantly and [illegible] on her side, and then with [illegible] sprang like a thing of life [illegible] and safely through the passage without even rubbing her paint, and the grim difficulty of the Still Dalles was cast contemptuously behind her. Now before her appeared her most formidable enemy at this stage of water, the big Dalles and continued narrows for a mile or more. It was not considered prudent to make the attempt until lower water, so she quietly landed at the mess house and bided her time. To-day the 18th as the weather indicated a thaw Agent [illegible] dreading a longer delay, dangerous, notified Superintendent Ainsworth who ordered him to attempt the passage immediately. Capt. Troup was notified to have his boat in readiness and at 2 P. M. an engine started from town bearing as passengers Agent Fordyce, Master Mechanic Curtis, Master Builder Holland and Messrs. Snipes, Smith, Murphy and Abernathy and arrived at the steamer at 3 P. M.

Everything was speedily put in readiness for the grand trial and at 3 the Queen moved forward for the journey. The first shot was a thrilling one, striking the opening to The Dalles in the center and passing through like a meteor; then for a mile or more was one continued struggle between her master and the current, parry and thrust through boiling rushing [illegible] water past and around rocks, until the spectators thought the victory won but a crowd of Indians on the rocks pointed with ominous gestures ahead. Every nerve was strained to its fullest tension and eager anxious eyes watched the river ahead. Suddenly the danger appeared and the fate of the noble Queen seemed doubtful, but her captain was equal to the occasion. No word picture can tell the story. To be dashed on the rocks seemed the only result and now the skill [illegible] must tell. [illegible] [illegible]

AN INTERESTING CASE

Is Preparation for an Attempt at Crime an Attempt in the Eyes of the Law?

For the last two days there has been on trial in Judge [illegible] court and a jury the case of the State [illegible] [illegible] Murphy [illegible] [illegible] to commit a felony in [illegible] Mr. Bull Dugan on the [illegible] December last by [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] fourth street [illegible] with intent to steal from him [illegible] being interrupted in such attempt by their arrest. Before the com[illegible] [illegible] Murphy and Lynch and two of the prisoners who [illegible] escaped from the county jail through a hole in the wall and were recaptured near Vancouver.

[illegible] on the part of the state was concluded on Thursday afternoon, upon which Messrs. [illegible] and Gregory, who appear for the defendant, moved the court for the discharge of the prisoners upon the ground that there was no evidence of any attempt to steal but merely evidence of a preparation to commit larceny. Even if the intent to steal could be inferred from the evidence, it was argued that there must be proved to have co-existed a criminal intent and an act in pursuance of the intent, and that such an act must be one that would, if carried to completion, have accomplished the crime intended.

One illustration was used, that a man could not be guilty of an attempt to commit murder by loading a pistol, but by attempting to fire it. By the loading a pistol could not accomplish a murder if carried to completion, but firing a pistol was an act which in accordance with natural laws would accomplish the killing. So it was argued that in this case the carrying to completion the act of conveying a man to a secret place could not result in larceny. It was, if anything, merely putting themselves in a position in which they could better attempt to steal, or, in other words, a preparation for an attempt.

The court overruled the motion, the court saying, however, that he had grave doubts about the case.

Yesterday morning, when the court convened, the opening speech for the state was made by Mr. Mulkey, who devoted himself chiefly to a review of the law of the case. Mr. Mulkey was followed by Mr. Gregory for the defense, who in an elaborate argument presented the points above stated and also several others which he claimed were fatal to the state's case, as that secrecy and force had both been alleged and neither were proven, and that there was nothing to show an intent to steal, but an intent to murder might as easily be inferred. He also argued that if the crime was anything it was kidnapping.

Mr. Mulkey stated that most of the points raised were new in this court and were therefore of considerable difficulty.

After hearing the opening argument [illegible] yesterday the court adjourned the further hearing of the case until Monday, when further addresses will be made and the case submitted to the jury for their verdict.

BEET SUGAR.

Production of sugar from beets is a subject which has engaged the attention of a considerable number of inquirers in all parts of the country. During years past THE OREGONIAN has published many contributions upon it. Dr. McMurtrie, a specialist of the agricultural department at Washington, has recently completed his report on the manufacture of sugar from beets in France, in the study of which he has been employed since his visit to the Paris exposition in 1878 as a representative of the United States. His report takes up consideration of sugar beet culture in 1747, when the first efforts were made in Berlin to obtain sugar from other materials than cane. It shows how experiments were made for a number of years in Germany and France. In both countries it is now an established and profitable trade. The annual product of beet sugar in France amounts at present to about 420,000 tons, of 2200 pounds to the ton, and of the value of $55,000,000. The laborers employed in the manufacture in France in 1875 numbered 51,023 men, 8367 women and 8102 children, which figures do not include persons employed in the cultivation of the root. Dr. McMurtrie regards 70 deg. Fahrenheit as the most desirable climatic temperature for cultivation of the sugar beet, and thinks that the best localities for it in the United States are New England, New York, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Dakota, Oregon and California, Washington territory, one or two counties in Pennsylvania and Licking county, Ohio. Statistics presented show that the cost of raising a ton of beets is $4. The total cost of manufacture was in 1873 and 1874, $7 09 per ton, and in 1877 and 1878 was $5 89 per ton. The cost of extracting the sugar from a ton of beets in the United States is estimated at $8.

In view of the difficulties in the way of introducing the sugar beet in this country, and the manufacture of sugar from the beet, the report suggests that the beets be raised first for the production of alcohol, which is done in France with great profit. To this end it also suggests that spirits from sugar beets be exempted from taxation for a term of years, and argued that the loss which the government might sustain from temporary reduction in the revenue from spirits might be subsequently compensated by a tax on the sugar produced. So, the report says, if we consider that, from the introduction of this industry, sufficient sugar may be produced to supply our home demand, it would not only become the cause of retaining annually in this country about one hundred millions of dollars and be a source of employment to over one hundred thousand laborers, but might at the same time become as fruitful a source of revenue to the government in the future as spirits and tobacco have been in the past and are to-day. The agricultural department is also wrestling with the problem of obtaining sugar supply from sorghum; and the commissioner has been speaking so positively of expected success in this direction that it is almost surprising now to find a member of the department making a report which seems to be based on the conviction that the beet may yet be the necessary source of supply. It is probable, however, that too much has been claimed for sorghum.

THE SUBSIDY BUSINESS.

Taking the hint from the attempt to subsidize the business of building and sailing ships, the Missouri legislature has been considering the propriety of presenting a memorial to congress praying that in the distribution of subsidies those interests that depend on agriculture be not overlooked and that to this end provision be made "to pay ten cents for each and every [illegible] raised" as a bounty, "to encourage and aid [illegible] may engage in so great a national industry, that the poor laborer may thereby get [illegible] bounty is asked upon [illegible] the laborer may have cheaper [illegible] list might be extended indefinitely. [illegible] system provides handsome and [illegible] subsidies to the saltmakers, the iron and [illegible] makers, the leather, silk, woolen and cotton goods manufacturers, to the sugar refiners, to several other branches of industry, but [illegible] to the agricultural laborers of the country. [illegible] this latter class, being a large majority of the whole people of the country, is left the important, but not, therefore, the less onerous, duty of paying the bulk of these proposed subsidies. Suppose now the agricultural classes of the country make a demand for a subsidy of half a cent a pound on cotton, two cents per bushel on corn, ten cents per bushel on wheat, five cents per bushel on potatoes and other vegetables and on all seeds, one dollar on each horse or mule, five cents per pound on tobacco and sorghum sugar, and proportionate bounties on all other farm products —these subsidies to be paid directly out of the treasury. There is nothing like equality before the law. There is no law to protect farmers, who have to sell their surplus productions for what they can get for them; if they fail to pay expenses, or to support themselves and families, they have to endure the consequences. An average of 25 per cent. of their cost of living is made up of taxes to pay subsidies to those engaged in other industries; and hence, if the government is to subsidize one part of the population, let the subsidies be made general and equal. The farm wagons which perform the transportation to and from the local markets and the farm cost more to purchase and annually transport more of the products of labor than all the steamers engaged in or accessory for the ocean commerce of the country. Why not subsidize the farm wagon? Why not grant a subsidy of so much per ton moved to and from market in the farm wagons of the country? The Missouri memorial may read a little extravagant, but as the Chicago Tribune truly says, it proposes nothing more unjust and outrageous than the other subsidies proposed and advocated in congress by advanced statesmen of both parties.

POLITICAL STRATEGY.

The senate would appear to be decidedly in the non-confirming mood. Large numbers of the nominations sent in by the president since the present session began are awaiting the action of that body; so that gentlemen who desire government positions at present are having an unusually harassing time of it. The chief trouble is that the president hasn't consulted the "bosses" in making the appointments. And the stalwart leaders of the senate, who aspire, one and all, to the high dignity of office-brokers, consider themselves "insulted" because he has nominated men who are not numbered among their own personal servants. Among these exasperating nominations are those of Foster for district attorney in New York (who has now been withdrawn because confirmation was refused), Lucas P. Thompson for collector at Philadelphia, and Stanley Matthews for the supreme bench. Foster is anti-Conkling, Thompson is anti-Cameron, and Matthews is an Ohio man. These objections are all regarded as insuperable. Then there are other distasteful nominations for official positions in several states, and aggrieved senators have all "pooled their issues," while the democratic brethren in that body appear not to care enough about [illegible] to come to the aid of the president. It is said, too, that democratic senators will not fight against the "stalwarts" to aid a president whose [illegible] is nearly at an end, and besides, that [illegible] would rather the vacant offices were held [illegible] till Garfield comes in, since the new president will then be compelled to take his position one way or the other—a consequence that will precipitate a new quarrel upon the republican party. The democrats think that through such a state of affairs they certainly would be gainers in a partisan sense, and moreover, that they would be granted favors by the opposing wings for their influence and aid. From the stand-point of party interest they appear to be playing their game shrewdly and well.

It might be supposed that the inutility, not to say positive folly, of Arctic expeditions had been so well demonstrated hitherto that all such efforts would have ceased long ago. For more than three centuries there has been over and over the same story of suffering and hardship, with no results worth naming. Not to speak of the absence of results of a practical character, there have been no gains of value to positive science from these expeditions. Vessels have sailed and never returned; other vessels have been dispatched to search for the missing ones and the whole of the repeated and continued effort has proved about as bootless as anything ever undertaken by human curiosity. The case of the Jeannette is now before the world. This vessel was dispatched as a personal venture by Mr. Bennett of the New York Herald, the government distinctly refusing to be bound in any sum for the expedition. Yet it appears that the granting of a register to the vessel is considered as having produced a sort of moral entanglement of the national credit with the expedition, from which it is impossible to escape, and on this ground the government is undertaking to defray the expense of a search expedition. Mr. Edmunds, of Vermont, in speaking of the subject in the senate, said that he should vote for the bill because he felt obliged to do so, but he believed that "the constant warfare against the north pole, which civilized nations are waging from time to time," was ill-advised and unprofitable. He thought the second vessel, if she pursued the Jeannette far enough would require still further efforts to extricate herself. There has never yet been a sufficient justification for the sending forth of polar expeditions, since it has been clearly demonstrated that the northwest passage, if it should be effected, would be such only in name. It would not be a commercial passage. Nor does it appear that any valuable scientific results can be obtained by further explorations in the region of perpetual ice and snow. If the Jeannette should reach the pole and come back again it would probably be able to add very little if anything to the knowledge which scientific men now have of the conditions that prevail there.

Horatio Bisbee, Jr., one of the Florida representatives, who was accorded his seat only the other day, though elected in November, 1878, was a candidate again last fall, and though he received a majority of the votes cast, Finley, his democratic opponent, was given the certificate of election. He gave notice of contest, and his attorney, General Jenkins, set about obtaining evidence. With Mr. Eagan, notary public, he went into Madison county a few days ago to examine some witnesses. Those who dared to give evidence were set upon by a party of democratic thugs, and Mr. Eagan's life was threatened, and one of the witnesses was killed. Madison county has for several years been overrun by a lawless gang of cutthroats of the democratic persuasion, who have made life burdensome to their republican neighbors. It sadly needs reconstruction. The evidence was so plain that even a democratic house seated Mr. Bisbee for the present term, and a republican house will doubtless seat him for the next one.

A vast amount of interest on national bonds, unpaid because uncalled for, and much of it long past due, is accumulating against the treasury. The sum now reaches the great figure of $1,400,000, and is daily growing larger. This money, or much of it, could be drawn by any one who has the registered bond on which the interest is due and not paid; but it is said there are thousands of persons who have bought bonds and, not knowing how to get the interest on them, prefer to lose the same rather than to expose the fact that they have the bonds. Others have interest due them and actually forget the fact, and it lies in the treasury vaults waiting for them to apply for it. Should one of the clerks of the bond division inform a person to whom interest is due of the fact, and the same be discovered, he would be instantly discharged.

The Ohio legislature proposes to nip in the bud any prospects the Western Union telegraph company may have for increased tariffs in that state by passing a law providing that any person connected with any telegraph company operating a line of telegraph in whole or in part in Ohio, who demands or receives more than twenty-five cents, and all additional words at the same rate, for transmitting any message of not more than ten words, between any two points in Ohio at which said company has located an office, shall be liable to a penalty of fine or imprisonment. It is also proposed to pass a law prohibiting any company from having an exclusive right of way in any part of the state, and to allow any telegraph company to erect lines upon the public highways, provided they do not obstruct travel.

Ex-Senator Lewis of Virginia has made a visit to Mentor. He reports General Garfield as saying that if he were a republican in Virginia he would do everything in his power to break down Bourbonism in that state, and, in his judgment, the republicans ought not to call a separate convention. Mr. Lewis' inference from this talk, he says, is that General Garfield believes that the republicans ought to co-operate with the Mahone party. This report gives a great deal of encouragement to the Lewis republicans in Virginia, but the report much needs verification. The Virginia Bourbons who have heard of it say that it will be a serious blow to their cause if this report proves to be true, and that it cannot fail to be a great victory to Mahone.

Pennsylvania is not a good field for bosses. Don Cameron's discovery of an independent spirit in the legislature in the matter of choosing a senator is followed by a set back to Mr. McMane's city machine. The very large element of the republican party in Philadelphia who don't like to be bossed united with the democrats and on Tuesday elected Wm. King mayor by five thousand majority. Ring rule which has long been obnoxious to the best men of the party in Philadelphia is thus severely rebuked, and its leaders permanently retired. The election of Mr. King is by no means a democratic victory.

Mr. Montgomery Blair, in a recent letter to a friend in Missouri, gives and vouches for this interesting piece of history: "Gen. Lee told my father in the room in which I write this note, when my father at Lincoln's request, offered him the command of our army, that he was utterly opposed to secession—regarded it as anarchy—and said if he owned every slave in the country he would freely surrender them rather than see the union dissolved, and yet he took up arms for the cause he himself had pronounced illegal and ruinous because his relatives and friends were involved in it."

No man can read without prejudice the letter from Mr. Parnell to his followers of the land league, without feeling that the Irish leader is a patriot and a statesman and that there is justice in his cause. Sagacity appears in his view of what will be the result of the coercive measures, devotion to Ireland in his refusal to leave a trying post in parliament for a trip to America, honesty in his appeal to his countrymen to merit relief from abroad before asking it, and broad statesmanship in his outline of policy. It is the worthy letter of a great leader to a suffering people.

Congress has made an appropriation of $40,000 toward paying for a monument on the Bennington battle field, and $30,000 will be added by private subscriptions and by the gift of the states of Vermont, New Hampshire and Massachusetts. There is a bill pending in the senate providing that the designs for the monuments which are to be erected to commemorate the great battles of the revolution shall be passed upon by an art commission, so that the memorials toward which congress is to give one-half the cost shall be worthy the name of art.

According to the Boston Economist, the total production of gold in 1880 throughout the world amounted to $118,000,000 ($39,000,000 of which was produced in America); of silver, $94,000,000 (of which $76,000,000 was produced in America); total of both, $212,000,000. The largest production in any one year was in 1853 —of gold, $236,000,000; silver, $49,000,000; total of both, $285,000,000. Since that year the annual product of gold has diminished one-half, and that of silver has nearly doubled.

The severe weather of the present winter has accomplished the triumph over the hostile Indians of the north which Uncle Sam's troops have so long attempted in vain. Nearly a thousand of Sitting Bull's braves are now in the hands of the government, and the old chief himself will soon surrender. His long and bloody career will doubtless be rewarded by a good reservation and liberal allowances in the way of warm blankets, good food and the whole range of civilized blessings.

The Erie, Pennsylvania and New York Central railroads now sell emigrant tickets, good from Castle Garden, New York, to San Francisco, for $54 75. The former rate was $65. The rate for emigrants from New York to Chicago has been reduced from $15 to $3.

Oregon is becoming known in financial circles east through the O. R. & N. Co. The numerous press dispatches which speak of the Oregon company and its enterprises sufficiently attest this. The stock commands an enormous premium on the market.

Mr. Bayard and other eastern senators, it is asserted, will oppose, and, if possible, prevent ratification of the new treaty with China, on the ground that it goes too far in forbidding Chinese immigration.

It is only thirteen days till the fourth of March. What a multitude of cabinet-making statesmen will then be out of a job!

PROF. PROCTOR.

His Lecture on Heavenly Bodies.

The following is an extract from one of Prof. Proctor's lectures in San Francisco, as reported in the Call:

Venus is nearest in size to the earth. If there is another planet inhabited in the solar system Venus must have an animal life nearest our own. We do know that there is a large expanse of water, and so far as we know, a like atmosphere to our own, but unfortunately we know little of Venus. To study Mars needs a very good telescope, a very good day on earth, a very clear day in Mars. Under these advantageous circumstances peculiar forms are seen on the surface of Mars (illustration). We have reason to believe that these green spots are seas, and the ruddy spots lands; and at the poles you will observe white spaces. These are greater in winter and smaller in summer, and go far to prove that the polar regions are snowbound. These polar patches can be seen glistening when no other portions of the planet are visible. Pictures of Mars, with the polar snow regions, were shown—one representing winter, the other summer. For over 100 years the waxing and waning of those snow-spots have been noticed. An ideal geographical map of Mars with the land and water divisions was then shown. We may now fairly say that those green markings are seas. Whether there is animal life, we can not say, but there is much in the machinery of nature upon that planet that we receive as necessary to animal life on earth. Land and water hemispheres of Mars were then shown. Earth's water occupies 75-100 of the entire surface, while Mars' water is [illegible]. This chart shows in those long, narrow arms of the seas, that as the water settles into the earth the seas will be contracted and will take on these shapes, as marine soundings show. This is a melancholy thought, and we would gladly turn to the moon to see if the changes have gone on in that body to the age of decrepitude. (Illustration of the moon.) Alas! we find everywhere evidence that no water exists in the moon. There may be an atmosphere, but it is excessively thin—too thin for animal existence, at least such as we are to contemplate. Here we have the melancholy picture of a world grown old, passed from youth to decrepitude. See the craters, the evidence of once vigorous youth. The indications of that period when life-giving water filled the hollows in the land and supported living creatures. There must have been water over these lower parts. The question is forced upon us that there must have been life in the moon. Such a picture speaks of a long period of time. Ideal landscapes of the moon were here shown. One represented a desolate mountain scene; the other the hollows that once were filled with the sea. To some the thought that life has gone out from this brilliant luminary, is now dead, may be a cause of pain. Jupiter and Saturn are in their youth. Venus and Mars may be inhabited but the moon is dead. The star hemispheres were then shown, and the professor dilated upon the infinite number of solar systems beside the one in which is our earth. We have every reason to believe that all these suns are the centers of planetary systems like our own. A disc was shown on which 324,198 stars had been painted by the lecturer at an expense of 400 hours of hard labor. With a good telescope, said the lecturer, I believe 100,000,000 suns can be seen, each the centre of a universe. Here we have eternity. Say that each one of these solar systems possesses but one inhabited world and that countless millions of worlds are being born into existence, have we not a glance at eternity? If we thought that we would have to look forward to the future only for death, the thought of the myriads of years before a planet like Jupiter will become inhabited should silence every murmur. We see all space, all time, occupied by life. We now behold the wonders of the infinite, and are ushered into the realms of the great unknown.

SCHOOL BOOKS.

PORTLAND, Feb. 18, 1881.

To the School Superintendent and Directors of School District No. 1: I wish you would explain to my satisfaction and that of others, why it is that school books are changed so often in this district, and new books ordered by the teachers only to be used a short time in their turn and then discarded for others, thereby making great expense to parents and guardians. This question is not asked to discredit the schools or to hinder the education of the rising generation, but in view of economy and justice to all. Let parents and taxpayers consider the subject, and I think there might be reform in this matter. The law does not provide for changing books so often as changes are now made.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

The Daily Oregonian.

SATURDAY MORNING, FEB. 19, 1881.

CITY.

DEATH OF MRS. MILLER.—On the 14th inst. Mrs. J. C. Miller departed this life at her home in La Center, Washington territory, of consumption, after a lingering illness. The deceased was the wife of one of the most popular and enterprising merchants of La Center. She was a very estimable lady, beloved by a large circle of friends and acquaintances and her death makes many hearts beat with sadness. Yesterday the remains were brought to this city on the steamer Latona. After reaching this city, the body was conveyed to Lone Fir cemetery and there laid peacefully to rest. The funeral was largely attended. Deceased was 30 years and 10 months old.

A SUGGESTION.—The attention of Street Superintendent Braden is called to the fact that E street, at many places, particularly between Seventh and East Park, is crowded with rubbish of all kinds. This street is not an exception, however, as on nearly every street, branches of trees are allowed to lie in the gutters for days at a time. If we are to have model streets (due to their cleanliness) let them be cleared up once in a while and give not only our own citizens, but strangers, a good impression of the metropolis of the northwest.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY.—The Sunday school of the Unitarian church will celebrate their 13th anniversary in the church to-morrow evening. Reports will be received from the superintendent and other officers. Singing will be by the children; addresses by Maj. A. F. Sears and the pastor. The children further present a number of concerted pieces, readings, recitations, etc., and a collection will be taken for the Sunday school cause. Exercises will begin promptly at 7 o'clock.

THE CHARITY ENTERTAINMENT.—On Monday evening, the 28th inst., the ball and dramatic entertainment for the benefit of Good Samaritan Orphanage, will take place at New Market theater. The dramatic club of Vancouver post will present the brilliant comedy of "My Uncle's Will," commencing at 7:30. Dancing will begin at 9. The affair is in the hands of a competent committee, and promises to be the event of the season of 1880-81.

SPEAKERS ANNOUNCED.—The following persons will address the temperance rally at the Taylor Street church to-morrow (Sunday) evening: David Newsome, Dr. J. W. Watts, J. F. D'Arcy, Mrs. Dr. Thompson, Chaplain Stubbs and others. Good music will be furnished between the addresses.

WEATHER MODERATING.—Telegrams from eastern Oregon yesterday evening report the thermometer only a few degrees below freezing point. There was some running ice at Wallula and Umatilla, but not enough to impede navigation, and boats made regular through trips.

EAST PORTLAND TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.—The regular monthly meeting of the East Portland Teachers Association will be held to-day in the Central building beginning promptly at 10 o'clock, A. M. Interesting and practical topics will be presented for discussion.

REQUESTED TO MEET.—The members and friends of the Hall street church and congregation are requested to meet in business meeting this (Saturday) evening at 7:30 o'clock. Important business to be attended to. Meeting conducted by Bro. Izer.

THE TRADE STICKS.—The jury in the case of Henry Worden vs Perry G. Baker in Justice R. E. Bybee's court, returned a verdict in favor of Baker, and the "boss" trade referred to yesterday seems closed.

LECTURE.—Judge Matthew P. Deady will lecture at the First Congregational church next Monday evening. This will be the fourth lecture of the course. The subject will be "Law and Lawyers."

REQUESTED TO MEET.—A meeting of all interested in the Good Samaritan Orphanage and Trinity Guild are requested to meet in the vestry of Trinity church on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

OPEN TEMPERANCE CONCERT.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH ENTERTAINMENT.

The vestry of the Congregational church was well filled last evening on the occasion of the musical and literary entertainment for the benefit of the Sunday school library. The opening number was a piano duet by Misses Shindler and Hurgren, which was gracefully rendered and well received. The glee club, consisting of Messrs. Watkins, Warren, Breck and Hanley, then gave "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming," which showed much talent and vocal training in the club. The reading in costume by Miss Augusta Allen, "A Accident to Josiah Allen's Wife," was perfect in its way and produced much mirth and a round of applause. Mrs. Wyatt sang "Hear-t Thou" with the taste and expression which characterize all her efforts in this line. The piano solo, "Tam O'Shanter" by Miss Shindler was excellent. Mr. Marvin's rendering of the auction scene from "Needles" was inimitable and fully sustained his well earned reputation as one of our best amateur readers. "The Clatter of the Wooden Shoon," a solo by Mrs. Cruzan, was given with fine effect and was much enjoyed by the audience. The closing piece, "Lullaby," by the glee club, provoked a double encore. Altogether the entertainment was a very pleasant one, and resulted in substantial benefit to the Sunday school.

VALENTINE SOCIABLE.

Among the pleasant social occurrences of the week was a valentine sociable at the Presbyterian lecture room Monday evening. The special feature was a recitation poem, written for the occasion by one of the young ladies of the church, introducing a series of tableaux and charades portraying scenes appropriate to St. Valentine's day. Sentimental missives were sold from a pretty bower, ice cream, lobster salad and coffee from the refreshment stand, and fancy articles and flowers from a bazaar. Over all the the ladies presided and all were well patronized and profitable financially and in the point of entertainment.

ODD FELLOWS MASQUERADE IN EAST PORTLAND.

The masquerade ball given by the Odd Fellows of East Portland Monday evening was in every way a complete success. When the doors were thrown open the hall rapidly filled with spectators, while the dressing rooms became crowded with the maskers. At ten minutes past 9 o'clock the band struck up a stirring march, the doors from the waiting rooms were thrown open, and the gay procession filed into the hall. Many of the costumes were original, in fact the great majority were home-made, and the absence of lords and ladies, counts and knights, was a pleasing feature. A majority of the maskers had invented and made their costumes each to suit his or her own fancy, and the natural consequence was that the characters were better sustained than usual at such parties. Two committees were set to work early in the evening—one to judge of the best sustained gentleman characters, consisting of Messrs. L. Cassel, Charles Smith and N. P. Tomlinson, and the other on the best sustained lady characters, consisting of Mrs. Capt. Chas. Jones, Mrs. Park Brandt and Miss Carrie Pape. The first-named committee finally awarded the first prize to Mr Ted Holman, who faithfully portrayed a "Chinese wood sawer." The second prize was awarded to the "School boy" in the person of Mr. John Pape. The successful ladies were, first, Mrs. R. F. Gillespie, and second, Miss Katie Oliver.

Among those present were: Miss Nellie Kearns, Zetta; Miss Lolla Bailey, Poverty and Riches; Miss Sarah Elam, Scotch belle; Mrs. Lewis, peasant; Tillie Miller, Eliza Jane; Miss Rockie Knott, country woman; Miss Katie Oliver, Nan the Good for Nothing; Miss Linda Miller, circus girl; Miss Jennett Smith, huntress; Henrietta Golden, toy girl; Mary Whery, letter carrier; Clara Frush, tamborine girl; Mrs. Evan Craw, Queen of Diamonds; Miss Mary Daly, street Arab; Mrs. R. F. Gillespie, scrubbing girl; Miss Maud Smith, Question; Mrs Chas. Smith, old lady; Cena Cadwell, Jerusha; Ella Johnson, princess; Belle Quigley, Starlight; Minnie Kelley, flower girl; Mrs. Baughman, Starlight; Mary Smith, Irish girl; Mrs. B. Reddick, country cousin; Miss Julia Barker, Bopeep; Emily Hoffman, Mother Pegity; Lu Kerns, Pinafore; Addie Buchtel, Vanity; Laura Jordan, Folly.

Professor Bulloch will have charge of the musical exercises, and later in the evening a band will furnish music for those who wish to remain and join in a dance.

CHARADE PARTY AT ASTORIA.

A joyous scene of youth and beauty, with a sprinkling of a few whose more mature years was just sufficient to moderate the transports of the younger ones, was presented in the parlors of Captain Geo. Flavel's residence, Thursday evening of last week, in response to invitations extended by his accomplished daughter, Miss Nellie, who received and entertained her guests as became one so popular as she among her friends in that city. At one end of the brilliantly lighted rooms had been erected a temporary stage, and as soon as the arrival of the guests had been announced the programme of the evening was commenced, consisting first of the acting charade of Li-(lie), Bra-(bray), Ry-(rye), the various characters in which were ably sustained, in costume, by the following ladies and gentlemen:

Fitz Hugh Brown	A. P. Anderson
Walter Anderson	Ed. Thorn
Dick Gray	D. A. Mackintosh
Mrs. Gray	Miss Nellie Flavel
Evelyn Gray	Miss Eliza Boelling
Mary Gray	Miss Dora Badollet
Colored Servant	Mr. C. A. Hale

These comprised the characters of the play until the third act when a speaker was introduced in the person of Miss Nellie Plummer, who did herself and the theme full justice.

The second part was a minor charade, "Sheet Music," which was followed by another as pleasant and thrilling as the first, entitled "Croquet," with the following cast:

Harry Lear	Mr. Fred. Rewell
John Smith	Mr. C. A. Hale
Pat Marley	Mr. R. Van Dusen
Lena LeVell	Miss Eliza Boelling
Bridget	Miss Nellie Plummer

In this, as in the other, the parts were well sustained, especially that by Mr. R. Van Dusen, as Pat Marley, the rollicking Irishman, whose finished acting and inimitable Irish brogue proved him to be a better Paddy than ams eurs generally are who tempt the thespian muse. Tableaux and other scenes in which the mirthful element predominated were then introduced and successfully rendered, each one present fully appreciating the richness and variety of the entertainment afforded by their charming hostess.

RECEPTION TO GEN. WHEATON.

The reception to Gen. Frank Wheaton at Vancouver, tendered by the officers of the staff and their ladies, on Wednesday evening, was largely attended and was a very successful and pleasant affair. The new hall at the garrison was tastefully decorated with festoons of cedar and large and small flags gracefully arranged by Lieut. Symons. Stacks of rifles, drums, guidons and other military emblems were placed in suitable positions, and the band, situate on the stage at one end of the hall, furnished excellent music. At 8 o'clock a march was played and the guests were presented in succession to Gen. Wheaton, after which dancing was commenced. The floor was in excellent condition. Supper was announced at 11 o'clock. The refreshments were bountiful and elegantly served. Much credit is due, for the success of the affair, to Mrs. O. D. Greene, Mrs. G. G. Sawtelle, Mrs. John Moore, Mrs. E. C. Mason, Mrs. C. T. Cushing, Mrs. J. Q. Adams, and Mrs. J. T. Gray, as well as to the officers, who also lent their aid.

DRAMATIC ENTERTAINMENT AT GERVAIS.

The Gervais Dramatic Association placed on the boards of Brown's hall, Thursday evening, the drama "Above the Clouds" and the farce "Two Heads Better than One." All the characters were well sustained, and reflected much credit on every one who took part. The hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, the audience being the largest ever gathered on a similar occasion in that little city. After the entertainment the well-pleased crowd adjourned to Gudman's hall and indulged in dancing till past midnight.

AMUSEMENTS.

"SELF."—This comedy,—it borders on the melodramatic,—is the story of unhappiness caused by extravagance in fashionable life; a recital of the ambition of a woman to surpass in the elegance of her establishment and her entertainments every member of the circle in which she moves. John Unit, a retired banker, is a rough, selfish, cynical bachelor, who judges everything, spiritual and temporal, by the one standard, "Will it pay." He has an unpleasant habit of telling the truth and makes nearly all of his listeners wince under them. Under all these disagreeable qualities he has substratum of kindness, which is reached by a self-sacrificing, modest, noble girl. He comes into the play only to bring out into strong light the faults of those around him, and in the end by lending such assistance as produces happiness all round.

Mr. Owens gives a perfect portrayal of this character. It is utterly unlike any of the other roles essayed during the engagement, and while not so riotously funny, quite as interesting. In the third act he gave one of the most touching, quiet, gentle bits of pathetic acting we have seen for many a day. In this he was ably assisted by Miss Adams, who invested the part of "Mary Apex" with much grace and feeling. Both were loudly applauded and recalled to the footlights. The remainder of the support were up to their usual standard of excellence.

The setting of the first scene was a complete dry goods store, from the well known house of Mellis Bros. & Co., and arranged by them. Certainly in presenting this play the customary "flats" are often used, and nowhere outside of New York and Philadelphia has an attempt been made to give the scene with the perfect detail presented last night. The audience was large and appreciative. "Self" will be repeated this afternoon and evening.

THE MATINEE.—This afternoon a matinee performance will be given for the express accommodation of children and adults. The splendid comedy of "Self," as played with such success by Mr. Owens through the east, will be repeated with the full company. The moral taught by this comedy is healthful and devoid of anything that can produce a pernicious impression. Little Maud, who has been ill for several days past, has entirely recovered, and will make her first appearance this afternoon as "Cash Boy" in the store scene. This will be a treat to the little folks.

FUNERAL OF DR. HAWTHORNE.

The funeral of the late Dr. J. C. Hawthorne took place yesterday afternoon from St. David's (Protestant Episcopal) church in East Portland. It was one of the largest funerals which has ever been witnessed in that city, and showed the degree of public respect and esteem in which the memory of the departed is held. Hundreds of the most prominent business and professional men of Portland, availed themselves of the opportunity afforded, and visited the residence of the bereaved family, to take a final look at the familiar face and form of the departed. During the entire forenoon, the remains were lying in state at the family residence. At a quarter past 1 o'clock the body was taken from the residence by the pall-bearers—Hon. J. N. Dolph, Hon. J. H. Mitchell, Hon. Sol Hirsch, Hon. Henry Failing, Hon. E. D. Shattuck, Hon. C. B. Bellinger, Hon. Jas. K. Kelly and Mr. Jas. B. Stephens—and placed in the hearse. The procession then took up its slow line of march for the church. Arriving in front of the chapel, which was crowded to its capacity with friends and acquaintances of the deceased, the casket was gently removed from the hearse by the pall-bearers and conveyed into the church. Services at the chapel were brief, but beautiful and impressive. A solemn anthem was chanted by the choir. Rt. Rev. Bishop Morris read the scriptural lesson. An appropriate hymn was sung, after which Rev. J. W. Sellwood, the rector of St. David's church, delivered a short address. He spoke words of consolation to the afflicted family and sorrowing friends, and paid a just and beautiful tribute to the life and character of the deceased. At the close of the address a solemn anthem was chanted. Rev. George F. Plummer, rector of the Trinity church, offered the concluding prayer, which ended the services at the church.

A few minutes before the conclusion of the services at the chapel, the members of Washington Lodge, No. 46, F. & A. M., and delegations from the several Masonic lodges of this city arrived at the church.

As the mortal remains of Dr. Hawthorne were borne from the chapel by the bearers the members of the Masonic order opened ranks. The casket was then conveyed through the lines to the hearse, which was in waiting. After the remains were deposited in the hearse, the Masonic members formed in line, and preceding the procession, took up the slow march for Lone Fir cemetery. On arriving at the grave the concluding religious services were conducted by Rev. J. W. Sellwood. These being ended, the Masonic brethren took charge of the remains, and the sad and beautifully impressive burial rites of that order were observed, Grand Master R. P. Earhart conducting them. When these ceremonies were concluded, the cold and cruel clods rattled harshly upon the casket, and all that remained mortal of a useful, public-spirited citizen and affectionate husband and father and a true friend was forever shut out from human vision and left to darkness.

SATURDAY MORNING, FEB. 19, 1881.

A MAIDEN'S MESSAGE.

O wind that wanderest over hill and vale and sea,
Blow round the home where he sleeps so peacefully,
And breathe upon his brow a loving kiss from me.

O golden "maiden moon," so calm and pure and bright,
Shed round and o'er him thy soft, tender streams of light;
Tell him how well I love him—tell him so to-night.

O stars all silvery bright, set on that deep, still blue,
Stars that are watching o'er us both the long night through,
Tell him my love for him is pure like you—and true.

O grand, grand snow-white clouds, slow drifting o'er the sky,
Bear to his heart a message, as ye pass him by;
Tell him my love would teach him how to do—or die.

O great, wide sea, on which the night-winds blow,
Sing in his ears thy music, calm and slow;
Sing to his heart I love him, sing it soft and low.

O tiny, laughing ripples, dancing on the shore,
O mighty ocean-waves, thundering your ceaseless roar,
Tell him I love so well I could not love him more.

O moon and stars, O clouds and deep, blue summer sea,
And restless, wandering winds, bear him these words from me:
"My own dear love, I love thee well—and constantly!"

—Good Words.

A BIT OF A FLIRTATION.

The sea was as wonderfully lovely, this bleak November day, as in the height of its summer beauty.

But there were few people to look upon it now. Along the deserted steamboat wharf, at which the summer steamers landed, there were walking a man and woman. Neither of them was looking at the splendor of color that flooded the western sky; they were only gazing at each other.

"I think she was a very silly thing," the girl was saying, with a contemptuous smile. "As for me, if I loved anyone—"

Here the young man caught her hand and held it close, while with smiling eyes fixed on her face, he repeated:

"If you love anyone! Ah, Ruth, don't put such an "if" as that in your sentence, for I am not going to bear it, I assure you. What did you acknowledge to me last week, when I tried to tell you how I loved you? Don't prevaricate now! Answer me truly?"

Henry Ralston's look held so much of passionate admiration, in spite of his playful words, that Ruth's own gaze drooped, and her face flushed, while her heart beat with the sweetness of this new life which had come to her.

"Tell me what you told me then!" he insisted, now speaking in a tender tone. "Say it to me again; you cannot guess how dear those words are to me, my darling."

He waited, and finally she said, softly:

"Do you wish me to say again that I love you?"

There was no one near, the wide beach was solitary, save for the sea-birds that flitted about. So Ralston suddenly bent his head and kissed the girl who had just spoken.

She looked quickly about her, and drew back as she did so.

"What if some one saw us?" she said reprovingly.

"They would only envy me," he said, with a smile.

Ruth Maynard was persistent, and she returned to her remarked.

"That girl who was so jealous must have been lacking in good sense," she said. "Now, as for me, 'if I loved anyone,'" with an arch look, "I should never be jealous. I should trust that person entirely, or I could not love him."

"Indeed!" said Ralston. "You are happily constituted then. I can't say as much for myself. I can easily imagine being furious, if you should flirt ever so little. So I warn you not to try it!"

The two wandered about the shore until night had deepened into darkness, and when at last they went toward Ruth's home, it was with footsteps that still lingered.

"I shall write every day, and shall be back in a month, if possible," were among Ralston's last words.

He was going to the western part of the state, and his business might detain him there; but he was full of hope that he could hasten matters.

Letters came regularly every day, and Ruth found the absence more endurable than she had expected.

When she was not reading one of her lover's letters, she was writing to him at every spare moment; so that she really had not much time to be lonesome.

In the middle of the fourth week he wrote that he had arranged to come back two days earlier than he had expected to. Could she come down to the station to meet him at the four o'clock train on Thursday, and could she come in the carryall? For he was to escort a young lady who was coming to visit Mrs. Briggs, and it would be pleasanter if they might all ride back together.

"Of course I will go in the carryall!" thought Ruth.

And, beyond a momentary vexation that there should be a third person to ride up with them, Ruth did not think of that part of Ralston's note.

Mrs. Briggs lived next door; the grounds adjoined. Whoever this young lady was, she would be a near neighbor, and if she remained long, Ruth would know her.

When the train drew up at the little seaside station, Ruth was on the platform waiting. She saw Ralston alight and help from the car some one whose face and figure sent a sudden pang of wonder through her heart. Of course the feeling was nothing but wonder.

The girl came forward by Ralston's side. She was, indeed, fair to look upon—a blonde of purest type, with soft, fluffy hair, lips as scarlet as wildroses, and looking as fragrant; blue eyes, that gave Ruth a glance so lovely, that the latter wondered what such a glance must be to a man.

"This is Miss Meredith, Ruth," said Ralston, after he had shaken hands with his betrothed.

No matter how much he wanted to kiss her, he could not do it now; and Ruth knew very well that she could not, but for all that it somehow seemed like a cold greeting to her.

How could any mortal man refrain from being attentive to such a girl as Miss Meredith?

Evidently Henry Ralston could not. He put her carefully on the back seat, and then he was continually turning around to speak to her; so that Ruth felt as if she would like to suggest that he take his place there, instead of remaining by her side in front.

Then she bethought herself how very weak she was to feel thus; she was like a child. Of course Ralston must be polite and attentive to this stranger.

Then she whipped up the horse, and was undeniably relieved when Miss Meredith was left at Mrs. Briggs' door.

Ralston came in to the house when Ruth reached home, and they had their delayed tete-a-tete. How tender Ralston was! How glad he seemed to be with her once more! But was he distrait in the slightest degree? And what made him look at her so curiously once or twice?

In the evening he went for a cigar and a stroll down the coast, and it was rather odd that he did not ask her to go with him.

She had thought he was coming back, but the hours went by, and he did not appear; and at last, after Ruth had struggled through a game of chess with her father, she went off to her own room. It would not be true to say she was not angry, and it was in vain that she reproved herself for such a state of mind.

"He might have come—he might have come!" she kept saying to herself. "Does he not want to see me, after having been away a whole month?"

The next morning, when Ralston came over from the hotel, he casually remarked that he had called in to see Miss Meredith the night before, to learn how she had endured the journey.

Ruth politely inquired about the beautiful blonde; and then, truth to say, she speedily forgot her, for never was Ralston more loving and devoted. When he had gone, Ruth smiled at herself for her unhappiness.

But now came days of trial to the girl. Somehow it happened that if she went to walk or ride, it was thought best to invite Miss Meredith, and Ruth had to confess to herself that under other circumstances she would have liked this new-comer, she was so gay, so gentle, so good-natured, always, and had such a happy power of amusing people.

The days went on until it was really winter weather. Ruth asked herself often if Miss Meredith were never going away. Already people coupled her name as often with Ralston as they did that of Ruth Maynard.

"What a fright I am, compared with her!" said Ruth, looking at herself in the glass; and then, sadly, "How long can I bear it and make no sign?"

And Ruth had made no sign. No one could have told that she even noticed what was eating into her heart, she bore herself so bravely.

One evening Miss Meredith was sitting in the parlor of Ruth's house. She had been spending the day there and now, just as the lamps were lighted, she was sitting alone, idly holding a book in her hand.

The door bell sounded. Some one in that house knew well whose ring that was, and fond heart bounded at the hearing.

A hurried foot in the hall and then Ralston entered. He came rapidly forward, his eyes glancing about the room.

"What! are you alone?" he asked, taking her hand in his. Then, his eyes fixed upon her face, hesitating an instant, he bent and kissed her, saying as he did so: "My dear Rose!"

Could not they see the trembling of the curtain over the window alcove yonder? Apparently they did not see it, for they stood side by side a moment, he still holding her hand. Then he said:

"Dear, you have no idea how lovely the night is! Come and look at the moon."

Then both went toward the window, and Ralston drew aside the curtain and confronted Ruth's pale face and gleaming eyes.

She seemed for the instant too petrified to stir, but stared at the two eyes that were like coals of fire.

"I am sorry to be in your way," she said at last, and tried to move from her position.

There was something strange in Ralston's face. He put out his hand and detained her.

"Stay!" he said. "Why do you go?"

The tone and the words seemed an insult to Ruth, after what she had witnessed. She flung off his hand.

"Why should I stay?" she cried. "As I said, I am sorry to be in your way, and from this moment I shall not be, Mr. Ralston. I tell you before a third person, because I never intended to see you again—I tell you that the little farce of betrothal between us is ended!"

She was going out of the room, but Ralston put himself resolutely before her, and in a dim way Ruth heard Miss Meredith utter an exclamation.

"Before you go, Ruth," said Ralston, who was now scarcely less white than the girl whom he addressed, "let me tell you that Miss Meredith is engaged to a friend of mine."

"In that case," said Ruth, calmly, "I am sure your friend ought to be congratulated. You and she are both false to him. Of what possible interest can your communication be to me?"

She now succeeded in putting her hand on the door-latch; but Ralston seized it and forcibly drew her back.

"Listen to me while I tell you something more!" he exclaimed. "This girl here," pointing to Miss Meredith, "have you not really guessed who she is?"

Ruth drew her hand across her eyes. She began to be bewildered.

"Guessed?" she repeated; "why should I guess? She is Miss Meredith."

"We both concluded that you had penetrated our little plot," went on Ralston, hurriedly; "for you did not seem one bit jealous; and, then, though she is beautiful and I am not, some people think she looks a trifle like me. She is my sister, Rose Meredith Ralston, and she is engaged to my dearest friend. When I told her about you, and that you scorned being jealous, she said, 'take me down to visit my friend Mrs. Briggs, and we will soon see about that.' It was a foolish thing to do, but we did it. I was much chagrined to find you were not jealous; if I had thought you were, the game would have been ended long before. When I came in to-night, Rose glanced at me in a way that told me you were in the window here. You know I had a sister. Why did you not suspect?"

Ruth did not reply, she could hardly collect her senses; her only emotion was one of relief. I think she never told her husband fully how much she did suffer in those days, and it was a good while before she could bear to look back upon them.

DECLINE OF OUR MERCHANT MARINE.

Mr. Henry Hall gives some Figures, Facts and Conclusions.

Mr. Henry Hall, who has given a great deal of attention to American shipping interests, and who published not long ago a valuable pamphlet on the decline of our ocean carrying trade, has an article on the same subject in the last Atlantic Monthly, which presents some fresh and suggestive statistics, and shows that in the recent remarkable revival of our national industries the shipping interest has no part. The vessels of almost every commercial nation in the globe throng our ports to compete for the profitable business of carrying our products over seas, but our own shipping list shrinks from year to year, and many of our vessels still nominally in service lie idle at our wharves. It is almost incredible that this one interest, which was depressed, perhaps, more than any other, during the period of hard times, should now receive no benefit from the return of national prosperity; and yet the figures show that our ships actually carry less transoceanic freight than they did three years ago, and less than at any time during the last thirty years, the period of our civil war alone excepted. The following tables are given in the Atlantic article as showing the number and nationality of vessels engaged in the whole foreign carrying trade of the United States, except to Canada, on the 4th day of August, 1880:

SAIL—TRANSOCEANIC.

British	1276	Hawaiian	6
American	884	Costa Rican	4
Norwegian	882	Bolivian	3
Swedish	143	Brazilian	3
Italian	598	Argentine	5

Dutch	19	Nicaraguan	2
Russian	64	Honduras	1
Danish	29	Belgian	1
Portuguese	26	Greek	1

French	67	Total	[illegible]

SAIL—TO WEST INDIES AND SOUTH AMERICA.

British	268	Dutch	2
American	144	Portuguese	1
Spanish	15	French	5
Haytian	13	Mexican	1
Norwegian	3	Costa Rican	2
Italian	1
Danish	3	Total	458

STEAM.

British	447	Danish	5
American	46	Dutch	6
German	35	Brazilian	1
Spanish	21	Mexican	1
Belgian	13	Costa Rican	1
French	9
Italian	5	Total	590

In the second classification nearly all the American vessels are small schooners, which might properly be ranked as coasters. Of the 46 American steamers included in the third table, only 14 are in the trans-oceanic trade; the others run to the West Indies or Mexico. Thus it appears that Belgium, a country not much larger than one of our New York counties, has about as many ocean steamships in our trade as we have ourselves, while Germany and Spain have more. Some of the figures in the list of trans-oceanic sailing vessels are also very striking. We find that the little, sterile, rock-bound kingdom of Norway, with a population less than that of the state of Massachusetts, employs 882 vessels in our trade; that Italy, which not many years ago appeared to be sleeping the sleep of commercial as well as political death, employs 598; and Austria, which has but a single port and that far up at the head of the Adriatic, has 165. Evidently our trade is profitable, or else the whole world would not be rushing here to secure a share in it. Collector Merritt, in a recent report, shows that the value of the exports of the port of New York for the year ending June 30, 1880, was $393,169,851, of which sail vessels took out $73,029,677, and steamers $210,139,174. So profitable is the freighting of this immense amount of commodities that even China is seeking to engage in the business, and is going to run a line of steamers to San Francisco. Dr. Walker, the statistician of the New York Produce Exchange, estimates the total amount of freight money paid in 1879 on American commodities exported at $88,304,000. On return cargoes the ships engaged in this trade are estimated to have earned $45,000,000. Here is a total of over $133,000,000 earned in one year in the American ocean carrying trade. If American ships now enjoyed the place in the trade they used to have, Mr. Hall says they would have received about $110,000,000 of this total of freight money. As it is they got only $23,000,000. The foreigners took all the rest.

Mr. Hall does not attempt to suggest a remedy for this discouraging state of things. He only points out the magnitude of the evil, and wisely leaves the cure to be sought by those whose business it is to provide it—the congress of the United States. He recognizes the difficulties which beset the problem of regaining our old position upon the seas, difficulties arising from the low wages and low rates of interest prevailing in other countries, the large amount of surplus capital possessed by them, and the absorption of our own capital in railroads in the newly occupied regions of our territory. Still, he thinks a remedy can be found if public sentiment be aroused in this country, and there comes up the same demand from our people which at different times has compelled England, France, China and Japan to act.

Coffee and Sugar.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—The Mincing Lane coffee is unsettled; large sales and shipments for Europe advis[ed] from Brazil, causing further depression. Prices have fallen to a point which will enable good coffee to be retailed at low prices and consumption may be expected to progress. Plantation Ceylon declined 1 to 2 shillings per cwt. since the 10th inst. Other kinds also favor buyers. There has been a few sales of low brown sugars at prices not reported, but the market is now steady. Refined and beet sugars have fallen 3d to 6d per cwt.

The Philadelphia Wool Market.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 18.—The market is easier and unsettled; Oregon fine, 30@32c; medium, 32@35c; coarse, 27@31. New Mexico and Colorado fine, 18@22; medium, 20@23; coarse carpet wool, 17@18; pulled extra Merino, 35@40; super, 35@40; lamb's super, 35@40.

London Wool Sales.

There is now more doing in wool; sales to-day 10,200 bales disposed of, chiefly Port Phillip, Sydney, and Adelaide. There is good demand and previous rates are well sustained.

THE TONNAGE SITUATION.

A Complete Review—How an Interested and Ignorant Press has Deceived the People.

The following letter from the San Francisco Commercial News on the tonnage situation goes to the root of the matter. The people of California, it seems, as well as of Oregon, have been deceived by ignorant and false newspaper reports:

I have been waiting for some one to tell "the truth and nothing but the truth" (as near as possible) in relation to the tonnage question. About all the published statements (with one or two honorable exceptions), it seems to me, are entirely one sided. While they are intended to be in and assist the wheat interest, they act like a boomerang, simply because they are one sided, being written for a particular purpose.

Of course, the people of the state want to secure all the tonnage possible, and it ill behooves any person or newspaper to place aught in the way of it. Yet something is done every day, and by those who know better. Why not say a good word for ships once in a while, especially when the situation warrants it. Ship owners have truly had a hard deal for the past few years, and when freights were fair (which was the rate last March) they did not cry "baby," but directed their tonnage to be chartered, and started on its voyage, hoping for better luck next time.

As the season progressed the crop had come to be a large one, and ship agents and charterers did what they could to induce tonnage to head this way. These efforts were counteracted in a measure by the silly writings of those who were trying to act entirely in the wheat interest, and who told farmers that freights are too high and must go down; that if sufficient tonnage is not found here, all that is necessary is to order it here; that strong efforts will be made to keep freights from going above a certain figure," etc.

While writing such trash, the crop of this state was known to be the largest ever gathered, and that unless a change for the better took place in consuming markets, the price of wheat must necessarily rule low, as freights be high. One great trouble in my opinion is, that our wheat people rely too much on "newspaper scribblers," who sit in their offices and concoct—yes, invent their predictions without studying the situation or seeking information from those who make it a study. By so doing, they think our farmers are being benefited.

What a mistake! Better state the whole situation—both sides of it, and let those interested draw their own conclusions; my word for it, they will do so correctly. A sad mistake occurs in supposing that by misrepresenting any benefit can be gained. One writer comes out and parades in high sounding figures the total quantity of tonnage passing the Golden Gate during the year. Of what benefit is that to farmers? It only tends to lead them astray. Another keeps a statement constantly before the public, showing an excess of tonnage this year as compared with the last. Another deception—in that our wheat crop is about double any previous year. We ought to have an excess—a much larger excess than we really have or can have.

Another scribbler, to bolster up his previous writings, will say: "At this time we have thirty vessels due," etc., when in reality we have hardly half that number. So I might go on ad infinitum, giving instances where the friends (?) of our wheat growing interest mislead that interest. There is no necessity of doing so. I must, however, notice a gentleman of big notoriety, who has stepped aside from his well beaten path of filling bags, who, for want of other "taffy" to fill up or make up his circular, says freights are too high, and then goes into a long course of reasoning why they must decline; in fact, he tells us so much of what is not his business that surely he must have a reason for so doing. Can you guess what that reason is? Think of his giving farmers advice as to wheat and freights, which he no doubt hopes they will receive and act upon in a like manner as his "taffy" on the bag question. "O, most learned judge?"

Now let us look at the tonnage situation as it really is. For this purpose I submit the following figures, including all kinds of tonnage bound here, of which we know a certain quantity cannot be used for wheat. That portion required for other business will more than make up for that bound here which is unknown to the public generally and not included in the published lists.

In the table below flour is not taken into account; neither is the quantity of wheat for consumption and seed estimated. Opinions vary as to our requirement, and that is left to the judgment of your readers and interested parties. Registered tonnage of vessels is given to ascertain the carrying capacity. In short tons, 40 to 50 per cent must been added.

	Jan. 1, 1881.	Jan. 1, 1880.	Jan. 1, 1879.	Jan. 1, 1878.	Jan. 1, 1877.	Jan. 1, 1876.
Surplus wheat per Produce Exchange statistics	190,273	203,844	239,055	122,310	182,656	[illegible]
Tonnage on the way, all kinds	191,385	155,729	83,282	101,645	153,580	[illegible]
Tonnage in port loading and free	84,232	49,346	38,295	[illegible]	63,014	[illegible]

The above amount of tonnage (January 1, 1881,) will carry about 400,000 short tons, and it is not necessary for me to state the quantity remaining, or go into particulars as to the estimates already made of the growing crop, which, with the rainfall to date, are certainly within the range of possibilities,—or to advise holders of wheat to sell or hold the same, or whether the fact of snow having fallen in England will cause a failure of the crop there, etc., etc. Such predictions I leave for others. My sole aim has been to present the tonnage situation in its true light, and give the figures showing same, and it is needless to add that ships will not come here simply for the ordering. We must have something tangible to place before owners. If tonnage comes in ballast, it is not reasonable to suppose that they can leave here with as low a freight as if they bring inward cargo, which partially defrays their expenses. It must also be borne in mind that the west coast war being virtually ended, tonnage will be required there, and in good quantity, too, as consuming markets are virtually bare of guano, very little having been shipped during the time the war has been in progress. Again, vessels are in demand at Australia, China, Calcutta and other eastern ports, and we can hardly expect them to come here unless equally remunerative business is secured. In consideration of this question, account must also be made of the fact (though I regret to say so) that our port is not the cheapest in the world.

NEW YORK FREIGHTS AND MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Nothing of special moment has occurred in the freight market the past day or two. Both the Sea King and Centennial have finished loading and are ready for sea. Rates remain quite steady and firm. Tonnage is more plenty, and although lines are rather short of ships, several under charter not having arrived, agents are now disposed to accede to demands of ship owners. Railroad freights are rather quiet, yet there is fair business doing for the season. Shipments for the past week include 100 cases of canned goods, 50 boxes castile soap, 60 cases milk, 101 bbls currants, 87 packages dates, 300 packages tobacco, 200 boxes soap, 50 bbls whisky, 10 bags coffee.

Freights via the isthmus are very dull and the steamer to sail to-morrow will have a small cargo for California except railroad material.

At Philadelphia the market is rather quiet, although the James T. Berry is about half loaded.

There is no vessel loading at Boston and such freight as is offered is sent here for shipment. Railroad freights at Boston are also very quiet. Shipments the only 275 bbls of mackerel.

Markets are generally dull.

Pork—Higher and quiet.

Lard—Active and higher.

Rio Coffee—Dull, ⅛c lower.

Refined Sugars—Quiet and steady.

CHRONIC AND DIFFICULT DISEASES
DR. BRENAN WILL GUARANTEE TO CURE any form of disease of the generative organs or private disease.
He has become an expert in the treatment of disease, weakness and derangement of the reproductive organs of both male and female, including diseases caused by the FOLLIES OF YOUTH,
such as SPERMATORRHEA, or SEMINAL WEAKNESS, or LOSS OF PERFECT VITALITY. Nearly two-thirds of all the Chronic Diseases spring, either directly or indirectly, from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by the majority of the Medical Profession.
I know that persons who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted by any form of sexual disease have a delicacy in calling upon the proper physician in time, from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance, and permit those diseases to exist until their constitutions become corrupted, their organization broken down and the hope of future happiness blighted, until death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence.
Everything strictly confidential under all circumstances.
Lost manhood perfectly restored.
Catarrh, Hemorrhoids, Throat Diseases, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint and all Diseases of the Eye and Ear, Stomach and Bladder, hurried cure without fail.
